Adult Comeback for Japanese Childhood Actresses with World Premiere in LA

Los Angeles, California, USA - 21st July 2008 - Nineties Japanese TV drama actresses, child movie star Aya Suyama (須山彩) and pop idol Yumi Kanno (菅野由美), make their adult acting comebacks taking lead roles in the new international co-production, the independent English-language movie LOST IN LOVE, which is premiering in Hollywood this month.

As part of this year's LA/NY Bi-Coastal Film Festival, LOST IN LOVE is heading the program in LA on 21st July at Laemmle Sunset 5, 8000 Sunset Blvd., West Hollywood, 90046 (Tel. 323-848-3500). The official movie website is at <http://www.LostInLoveMovie.com> and the official Film Festival homepage is at <http://www.nyfilmvideo.com>. Interviews with the stars or crew, and tickets for the world premiere can be requested through the Director/Producer Guy Orlebar at his details above. Ms Kanno's official homepage can be found at: <http://www.kannoyumi.sakura.ne.jp>.

Ms Suyama was last seen in the hit Japanese TV drama series "God, Please Give Me More Time" (神様、もう少しだけ) alongside Asia superstar Kaneshiro Takeshi, and her last film role was in the cult movie School Mystery (新生トイレの花子さん). Ms Kanno starred in the live-action adaptation of the hit anime Kendaiichi Case Files (金田一少年の事件簿) and continues to regularly appear on Japanese television. LOST IN LOVE is the first English-language venture for both actresses and marks Ms Kanno's movie debut.

LOST IN LOVE is the highly autobiographical directorial debut of British-born, Hong Kong-based filmmaker Guy Orlebar, concerning a young Englishman who must travel to Hong Kong, where East meets West, to search for his love and the true meaning of life. Starring also London thespian Bene't Lynton (THE FIX) and Hong Kong kung fu master Gordon Liu (KILL BILL), and global musical talent, this is a love story of truly international proportions. How far would you go for love?
