Oxford Grad swaps Gown for Red Carpet with Hollywood World Premiere

Los Angeles, California, USA – 21st July 2008 – The world premiere of the new international co-production, the independent movie LOST IN LOVE, premiering in Los Angeles this month, marks the directorial debut of Oxford University graduate Adam Garrett, under the pseudonym Guy Orlebar, reaching Tinsel Town.

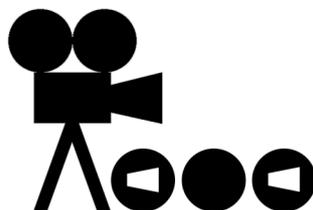

As part of this year's LA/NY Bi-Coastal Film Festival, LOST IN LOVE is heading the program in LA on 21st July at Laemmle Sunset 5, 8000 Sunset Blvd., West Hollywood, 90046 (Tel. 323-848-3500). The official movie website is at <http://www.LostInLoveMovie.com> and the official Film Festival homepage is at <http://www.nyfilmvideo.com>. Interviews with the stars and crew of the movie can be requested through Mr Orlebar at his details above.

After studying at University College, Oxford University and obtaining a Master's degree in Engineering and Computing Science in 2000, Mr Orlebar moved to Asia where he studied at the Hollywood Film Institute in Hong Kong, before founding his own production company, Agog Films. Asked whether his degree has any relevance to filmmaking, Mr Orlebar replies "Absolutely. So much of filmmaking is done on computers these days that having the ability to readily pick up new computer skills is essential. Plus the confidence and ability to both perform and lead under pressure that the Oxford experience provides has continued to be of immense help throughout this project."

LOST IN LOVE is Guy Orlebar's highly autobiographical directorial debut, concerning a young Englishman who must travel to Hong Kong, where East meets West, to search for his love and the true meaning of life. Starring also Hong Kong kung fu master Gordon Liu (KILL BILL), with leading actors from the UK and Asia and global musical talent, this is a love story of truly international proportions. How far would you go for love?
